28 October 2016 THE DOVETAIL TRIO

The distinctive voices and acclaimed instrumental talents of Jamie Roberts (BBC R2 Folk Award nominee), Rosie Hood (BBC Performing Arts winner), and Matt Quinn (Folk Degree alumnus) combine effortlessly to present England's traditional songs with a bold and fresh approach. Together they explore familiar narratives and modern themes with infectious energy and a passion for musical heritage.

25 November 2016 JOHN KIRKPATRICK: Carolling & Crumpets

One of the most well-known and popular performers on the British folk scene, John takes a heart-warming look at the timeless rituals found in English folklore and folk music at Midwinter. Magical songs of wassailing, wren-hunting, stirring the fire and feasting – toe-tapping tunes and choruses - hilarious original songs –a sprinkling of carols – and, of course, exceptional squeezebox playing.

27 January 2017 NINEBARROW

Jon Whitley and Jay LaBouchardiere combine breathtaking vocal harmonies and melodies. As well as crafting unique and engaging original material, Ninebarrow also take a wide-range of traditional folk songs and rework them in their own, distinctive way. Exceptional singers and musicians, Ninebarrow are passionate about the stories behind their songs, combining their music with history and folklore.

StirringsEditorial, Letters and OpinionsFrom The Editormagazines that work thisThe Future of Mardlesmagazines that work this

Elsewhere it is being mentioned that several members of the Suffolk Folk committee plan to step down from their posts and in some cases to quit the committee altogether at next year's Suffolk Folk AGM. I don't have a specific plan to resign as editor of Mardles, but next year the possibility of retirement starts becoming realistic and, for various personal reasons, I might find myself moving out of the East Anglia area any time after that. While it would in theory be possible to continue producing a magazine from just about anywhere in the world, I don't see how I could realistically take an informed and active interest in things folky in East Anglia from (as is likely) West Yorkshire.

With such an exodus (not just me!) it's possible that Suffolk Folk will collapse entirely. It's also possible that a new Suffolk Folk will rise, Phoenix-like, from the ashes of the old. It's happened before. It would be great if a whole younger generation of folk music enthusiasts (they do exist!) turned it into something quite different. A magazine like Mardles might or might not be part of such an enterprise – who knows? Whatever happens, of course, all the things that you can expect for the next year will happen, so don't let it stop you from renewing your membership!

Giving it Away

While we're on the subject of controversial changes, there's something that has been occupying the minds of the committee for more than a year, in between more immediate concerns. It was a change that nearly happened. I think the details can now safely be revealed.

The plan was to make Mardles a free magazine. There are other regional folk magazines that work this way. Unicorn is the nearest example, covering Herts, Bedfordshire, Buckinghamshire and Cambridgeshire.

This is how it might have worked:

- The magazine would be supported by adverts, which would be much more expensive than they currently are.
- The print run would be much greater (Unicorn's is over 3000 for example) to justify higher costs for the advertisers as more people get to read it.
- Unicorn charges for listings entries. We didn't actually discuss whether to do that with Mardles.
- Distribution would involve driving around the area to drop bundles of the magazine at sessions, clubs and pubs, and there'd be many more copies to get out there. Alternatively more bundles than nowwould be sent out by post or courier.
- However, distribution would be easier because no payments management is needed – just drop off a bundle and carry on to the next venue.
- For us, it would help get many more copies of magazine out to the counties adjacent to Suffolk, which we already cover in listings and editorial, and that would encourage adverts from clubs and events in those areas.

We decided not to do it. We didn't think Suffolk Folk members would think much of paying for a free magazine, even if you still got it posted to you; we couldn't be sure of selling enough adverts to pay for the cost of producing the magazine, and we wondered how we could cope with the distribution of thousands of copies.

So nothing much will change for the next year, but after that – anything could happen, and you might need to be part of it.

A Suffolk Folk Promoted Concert

News and information about Suffolk Folk From The Snug

My report as Chair of SF is all about the organisation itself, any news that may be of interest to you and a general overview of our activities.

It is always a bit of a problem to find something to say at this time of year as many of us have been away attending various festivals or taking a holiday. I can tell there are signs of returning life, however, as Stan Bloor has already started to send around posters and fliers advertising up-and-coming events that he has organised on our behalf and for your enjoyment. These include the next Folk at The Ark concert in November and the very popular Carol Concerts that he and Maggie Moore run in December. You will find more details as you turn the pages!

At the last committee meeting we did a bit of a survey and found that out of the committee of ten, six people are standing down next year.

This leaves a serious shortfall and you will find a note to that effect included on the renewal form that accompanies this edition of Mardles.

The last time we did meet up was at the Folk East Festival in August when we had high hopes of manning a stall for Suffolk Folk and generally distributing and selling lots of copies of Mardles.

This worked well for one day but then the tent, the stall and the Hagneth Morris sticks disappeared in a van – dismantled by the site team amid fears that the whole thing would take off in the high winds that were forecast for the evening, never to be seen again!

Thus we lost an excellent opportunity to promote everything properly and that was a big disappointment.

Many thanks to all those who helped to assemble the stall – it was great whilst it lasted!

Education Guest Performers in Schools

See the front cover of this issue for a picture of the Suffolk Folk Schools Country Dance. The organisers renamed the event this year in recognition of Suffolk Folk's regular sponsorship – it wasn't our idea!

Suffolk Folk Schools Country Dance

It was another baking hot morning in July for this year's Suffolk Folk Schools Country Dance.

Seven schools took part and for four of them it was their first taste of country dancing. Syzewell Gap provided the music and Mary Panton led the dancing with her usual enthusiasm and energy. We prepared the children by putting instructions for some of the dances on the band web site, together with suitable music so they could practise beforehand in school. These are available as a permanent resource for schools. (www.syzewellgap.co.uk/schools.htm)

As usual it was wonderful for us in the band to watch and play for about 230 children who were all having a great time. After the dancing several children told us how much they enjoyed it – 'the tunes were amazing' said Jack, while Ciaran said 'the dancing was awesome'. Lilijana and Evie thought 'it was a great experience' and said they'd like to do it again next year.

Many thanks to Suffolk Folk for sponsoring this event; without your backing this simply would not happen and hundreds of children would miss out on the opportunity to learn folk dances and to enjoy the experience of dancing with others. A big thank you too to Kelsale primary school who provided the venue this year – the shade on their field was much appreciated as were the ice-pops they somehow conjured up for all the children!

We always welcome new schools who are keen to be involved so if you know of any primary schools who would like to take part next year (usually in July), tell them to keep an eye out for info sent out to schools just before Easter, or for more information get in touch with annie@syzewellgap.co.uk

Coldfair Green School Midsummer Festival

Mike Fordham instructs a set of young dancers

It was lovely to see so many join us for the Midsummer Festival this year. Our whole community circle dance had nearly two hundred people in it and great fun was had, although the field feels a little smaller than it used to! It was super to have Favotty* join us, providing the music and some instruction for a number of country dances which the children enjoyed learning and performing during the day.

Change of Management at the Rumburgh Buck But the Music Goes On

The Rumburgh Buck

By the time this article goes to press Gary and Kate Cornthwaite will have recently have left the Rumburgh Buck after a tenancy of 14 years, providing hospitality, good ale and food for all.

Gary and Kate at the Buck

Traditional acoustic music has thrived at the 'Buck' for as long as I can remember, having played there since the early 1970s. There have only been 6 landlords since 1926, which tells all. Gary and Kate have been most supportive, making musicians and dancers of various genres very welcome.

Their generosity and encouragement will be much missed.

The good news is that sisters Kerry and Becky who have worked in the pub for 15 years are taking on the remaining 3 years of the current lease and will be carrying on as before. I'm sure we all wish them success.

Gary and Kate will be having a well-earned rest for the time being and devoting more of their time to supporting the Hughes Syndrome Foundation.

Alasdair Cameron ~ September 2016

A Successful Launch for Dance Folkus

Dance Folkus held its first dance evening on Friday September 2nd in the Burness Parish Hall, Melton. It was a huge success – an enjoyable evening with a great atmosphere. Around 70 dancers came along and the 'Come All Ye' band numbered 17 musicians. Helen Howe was our caller and the band was led by Tracey Wisdom and Richard Cove.

Dance Folkus evenings are always on the first Friday each month starting at 7.30pm. Together with 'Ceilidhs on the Move', we are the only regular monthly dance clubs in Suffolk with a live folk dance band.

Dance Folkus aims to be a little bit different by providing opportunities for local session musicians and others to experience playing for folk dance in our 'Come All Ye' Band. In addition, people who want to try calling an individual dance may do this by booking a spot in advance. This may be a recognised set dance or even one they have invented themselves.

The dances are for adults (16+). However, students are particularly welcome and if notified by email in advance, are offered an excellent entry price of  $\pounds 2.00$

A song or dance spot is planned each month and this will be a chance for local dance sides and singers to perform. At our September event we were treated to the dulcet tones of Megan Wisdom – a beautiful performance. At our next dance on October 7th, John and Sue Cubbin will be our song spot guests.

Unfortunately the attendance at Dance Folkus in September was so great that the hall was full. As a result we will have to limit the number of musicians who can to play in the band in future to sixteen. It is advisable for all musicians and dancers to book their place in advance by email. It is cheaper too. A larger hall has been booked for future events but is not available until March 2017

To book, contact Rob Neal by email Dancefolkus@aol.com or, if necessary, phone 01473-610951

Busy Summer for SqueezEast

SqueezEast Concertinas have been on the road this Summer!

In June we hosted our annual day of ensemble playing at Stamford Arts. We managed to persuade conductor Paul Barrett to lead proceedings again and once again his selection of music was really well-chosen, much of which he arranged himself – what talent we produce here in East Anglia! As ever this event was very well attended by getting on for forty concertina players from up and down the country. It was also a great opportunity to meet up with old friends and make new ones.

Our next booking was the Folk East Festival in the grounds of Glemham Hall near Ipswich. On the Sunday morning we ran a one-hour taster session to promote the playing of the concertina. Despite the early start twenty-eight would-be players turned

News from the EFDSS Recipients of the Malcolm Taylor Grant for Folk Collections Announced

The English Folk Dance and Song Society (EFDSS) has announced two recipients of the inaugural Malcolm Taylor Grant for Folk Collections.

The awards have been made to celebrate the work of Malcolm Taylor, who was Librarian and later Director of the Vaughan Williams Memorial Library (VWML) from 1979 to 2014.

The fund was established to support the development of small folk arts collections and archives, and to promote good practice in the creation and development of collections.

The 2016 awards have been made to filmmaker Stewart Morgan and collector John Earl.

Stewart is creating a production archive for the documentary film he created around George Butterworth. The archive consists of more than 12 hours of audio and video footage, featuring experts speaking about Butterworth's life, work and the early 20th century folk song and dance revival and he will use his grant to purchase hardware to store and maintain the footage.

John has been awarded a grant to buy low acid boxes to store and preserve a collection of late 18th to early 19th century sheet music, comprised primarily of popular and music hall songs. Sharp and his contemporaries tended to pass these forms of music by when they were collecting, so this collection will allow a deeper exploration into the music enjoyed by communities of that period.

Laura Smyth, EFDSS Library and Archive Director, said: "Establishing a fund to support the development of small folk arts collections and archives seemed an appropriate way to mark Malcolm's 35 years as director of the VWML as he was passionate about helping such collectors and collections. "The purpose of these grants is to promote good practice in creation and development of collections. Both of these awards are supporting projects that will preserve folk history for future generations to enjoy and learn from, and Malcolm was involved in the decision making process of who should be selected for the inaugural grants."

EFDSS will offer up to three grants annually of up to £300 for the development, creation and preservation of folk related materials. Grants can be used for anything from the purchase of archival quality packaging and remedial conservation work to courses and advice on organising, cataloguing, indexing, and preservation to best practice standards.

The 2017 round of grant awards will open for applications in March next year. Visit www.vwml.org/vwml-about-us/vwmlgrants for more information.

Invitation to Youth Folk Dance Groups

U.Dance 2017 is now accepting applications from youth dance groups who would like to participate in next year's national festival, which will take place 13th - 16th July in Birmingham, with regional festivals taking place across England in the winter and spring. Please find all the relevant information at the One Dance UK web site www.onedanceuk.org/?s=u.danceon.

U.Dance 2017 is open to all dance groups practising any style of dance (dancers aged 11 to 19 or up to 25 if disabled). EFDSS and U.Dance are keen to encourage more youth folk dancers to get involved with the U.Dance programme.

Morris On! Dave Evans and Gill Brett

Morris On!

Welcome to the autumn / winter edition of Morris On!

This time we have a selection of short pieces on seasonal Morris traditions starting with memories of the Kenninghall Wassail. We also have a quick look back to some of the summer festivals and the more recent event of the East Suffolk Ring Meeting where Adam Garland retired as Squire of the Ring in surprising fashion. We have provided an update on DanceEast and English folk dance and something about the continuing controversy of "blacking-up". Finally, there are the usual quick updates on Morris news.

We had wanted to include a couple of other items on Little Egypt and "Older Dancers – When is it time to stop"? but unfortunately these have had to be held over due to lack of space.

If you or your side have any news or want to have a rant just get in touch. Please also let us know about any changes in your officers or practice arrangements as a result of your AGM.

Winter Solstice

A new season begins bringing with it the age-old winter festivals: a mélange of Christian and pre-Christian symbolism, celebrating light at a time when days are short, plenty after harvest and good company.

At Winter Solstice last year we were invited to an old and lonely farmhouse deep in east Suffolk. In the farm kitchen, little changed in centuries, were a group of people drinking and exchanging stories. At a given time, those of us who had no part in what was to come were led out into the night by an elderly but sprightly little lady. Leaving signs of habitation behind, she sure-footedly led us through the dark along hedges, round woodland, through pastures and over stiles. I was intrigued, but had no idea of where we were going or, for that matter, where we had come from.

At length we crossed a narrow bridge leading over a river and through a copse to the garden of an old inn. A menacing group of tall, black-robed, faceless and silent figures loomed out of the dark, standing sentinel, their heads lost in greenery.

Lanterns marked a processional way across the garden and a crowd of people quietly waited for – what? Eventually a tiny flickering light, a will-o'-the-wisp, appeared far away across the fields. Slowly approaching it became a dozen flaming torches borne aloft by stern, black-faced, silent men in the garb of 19th century farm Crossing the bridge, the only workers. sound the thud of their hob-nailed boots, they filed between the lanterns to the courtyard and formed into sets for Molly dancing, the heavy rhythmic East Anglian form of Morris. As the music began, some of the men stood guard, unsmilingly gazing out at the crowd as if protecting a mysterious and ancient rite. Indeed I did have the feeling that here was something very old, a custom that had survived into the 21st century in an isolated pocket of rural England. It sent shivers up my spine.

This was our introduction to Old Glory Molly Dancers at the The Locks Inn at Geldeston. Old Glory dance only during the winter, celebrating the winter festivals. Their performances are characterised by a strong sense of theatre. If you want to see them, wrap up well and get there early as there is often a torchlight procession to the venue. Dancing out dates are printed under Morris Winter Tours.

Wassailing with Kenninghall Morris

Welcome to Kenninghall, a village somewhere between Diss and Thetford. The village is fortunate to enjoy a wide variety of social events.

The first event we encountered following our arrival in the village in 1998 was the Progressive Lunch. This was a fairly boozy affair during which a large number of the village were fed and watered. Each course was at a different location throughout the village. The final course (cheese and biscuits) was held where there was a swimming pool made using straw bales and silage plastic (a design used by several people in the village, including us when our boys were young) and croquet, along with copious amounts of local ale and cider. A great way to get to know the village folk.

This was followed by the Village Show. My better half went down to offer her services as a sax player where she admitted that, at the time, most of her playing was for a clog morris side I was part of in Hertfordshire. This brought on the request that I gather a few other people so we could put on a performance at the show. At the time Viagra was big in the news so we had learnt a Border dance called Brimfield which would fit on the small stage and could be made suitably rude – for the show we called it the Viagra Dance.

Following the show there remained some enthusiasm to continue – so Kenninghall Morris was born. Managing to attract a number of others to practice, which originally took place in our back garden but as numbers grew moved to the Village Hall, we set about learning a few dances. Having learnt some more Border dances, we devised a simple costume and started dancing at the two (at that time) pubs and some village events.

In 1999 the village planted the first of two new woods, The Millennium Wood, which was designed to include an acre of orchard. The fruit trees, mainly Norfolk varieties, in the orchard were funded by donations from individuals and groups from the village and planted in 2000. Soon after, the Kenninghall Lands Trust was set up to purchase an additional 10.5 acres adjacent to the existing wood and this was finally purchased in 2002 and planted by the village in 2003.

The Lands Trust have continued to work to maintain both woods and the orchard, and hold regular events to encourage use of the wood and to raise funds. The two main events were the Wassail, which was normally held around twelfth night between 2005 and 2012 in the orchard, and Mid-summer events which are still held annually in the wood.

Morris On! Dave Evans and Gill Brett

The Wassail, Old English for 'be healthy', was a surreal affair with the Lord of Misrule. who was there to manage proceedings, a Green Man, music and singing and, of course, the Morris Dancers. Oh – and a fair amount of cider. The cider - well, some of it - was soaked into toast which was then hung from the branches of the trees in the orchard along with other artefacts; normally one was more festooned as it had been chosen as the representative tree for the year's event. Words were spoken and wassailing songs sung, all with the aim of encouraging a good crop the following Autumn. The tree spirits were woken with lots of noise, including on one occasion a blunderbuss, and the whole celebrated with the passing round the Wassail cup of cider. The Morris Dancers entertained as the evening progressed with more cider and a warming fire. Sadly, the Wassail has now ceased due to poor weather causing a slippery approach to the wood and orchard.

As with all sides, numbers of dancers and musicians have risen and fallen but we have always managed to have enough members to keep the side going. We have been able to dance at festivals, fetes and many a pub in the area.

If anyone lives in the area and is interested in joining Kenninghall Morris – after all it is great exercise, a great way to socialise and builds up a bit of a thirst – then please get in touch with us (bagman@kenninghallmorris.org.uk) or look at our Facebook and web pages. New dancers and musicians are always welcome.

Festival Round-Up Sheringham Potty Festival

The Potty Festival is now under new management but you wouldn't notice the difference, which is meant as a compliment.

As far as I recall the only change was a different school to have breakfast in. The sun shone, it threatened to rain, it was windy (see photo) and the sea was freezing (but I still had a swim). Many of the same sides were there which meant: The Witchmen, Leeds, Pig Dyke, Bury Fair, Little Egypt, Danegeld, Lady Bay Revellers (who dance Cotswold very well), Wrigley Head Clog (who disappeared into the pub after one dance), Peterborough, the Hoofers and Hageneth, and about 30 other sides many of which I've never heard of and most of which I didn't see.

Peterborough dance in the wind with musician expecting rain

The seasiders love it and come out to watch in huge numbers and an appreciative and large audience is a real treat for the dancers. Sheringham looks beautiful and it's a great place to spend a long weekend. We took our new campervan and after much effort and help we managed to get the awning up. Apart from that – same as usual really!

Folk East 2016

A large Morris presence this year with 18 sides, meaning that there were 2 dance stages plus overflow venues at local pubs.

There were not only the usual local suspects, but it was good to see the Witchmen (Kettering), Worksop), Rattlejag (near Harlequin (all over) and Anstey Morris Men. New to Folk East this year were Mortimer's Morris, a women's North West side from Nottingham. It was Anstey's second appearance at Folk East and they showed that Cotswold can and should be done with this height and vigour and was demonstrated by all their dancers regardless of age. Mortimer's were enthusiastic and lively with great music from their band, which includes a hurdy gurdy and bouzouki, so many of their tunes have a French lilt and are very different from the traditional North West music. They also instigated "kit envy" in other sides with their very attractive costumes!

Mortimers do a foot-up

When a side has done the same dances at the same venues with the same neighbouring sides for years, it's easy to grow comfortable and perhaps a little bit lazy. It's good to see different groups of a good standard who raise the bar and remind us how the dances should be done and inspire us to perform them how (we like to think) we used to do them. A little bit of competition is always good!

Adam's Achievement

At the recent East Suffolk Ring meeting that I attended, held on the first weekend of September, Adam Garland (East Suffolk MM and previous editor of this column) handed over the Squire of the Ring badge and chain of office (you should have seen it) to Eddie Worrall of Saddleworth Morris Men.

As part of the handover process Adam made it clear that he wanted to cement the inclusive changes to the Morris Ring that he has implemented to enable it to work constructively with all Morris organisations. He achieved this with some dramatic changes to usual Ring custom and practice. As we have previously reported, he had already ensured that Ring sides could include women musicians in their performing side at official Ring meetings. At the East Suffolk meeting he reinforced the change by having as his invited guests Nicki Pickering, Chair of Open Morris and Fee Lock, Secretary of the Morris Federation. Not only were they invited to attend the meeting they sat at the top table for the feast and with the other "Officers" of the Ring and the Squire of East Suffolk they performed Valentine (Fieldtown) at the massed show outside the Moot Hall in Aldeburgh.

I think it is fair to say that this shocked some male Morris dancers and I heard at least one predicting the end of the Ring and the takeover by the Federation, as the Ring had lost its purpose and "USP". This is unlikely to happen, in my view, and I think Adam should be congratulated for sensible changes that enable the Morris Ring to be more inclusive and so more appealing to men's sides, whilst at the same time ensuring that there are friendly, constructive relationships with all other sides and organisations in the Morris family.

DanceEast Suffolk Folk Committee Apply Some Leverage

In the last edition Gill raised the question of approaching DanceEast about any possible interest in Morris dancing. Since then the Suffolk Folk Committee have tried, without success, to contact DanceEast for a mission statement, principles and current projects. We do know that, like Suffolk Folk, they have a schools programme to enable "schools to work together to explore the benefit of culture on students with a focus on dance and movement, and to build confidence in movement teaching in the schools". What better way of learning about Britain and Suffolk's culture than learning about and performing Morris or other English folk dances?

If anyone from DanceEast reads this, perhaps they should also read issue 3 of "Participate", the occasional newsletter of The Foundation for Community Dance (communitydance.org.uk). Issue 3 includes an article "It's time to embrace English folk dance" from Laura Connolly and Rachel Elliott of EFDSS, explaining how they introduced young people, new communities, schools and families to something from the huge range of folk dance we have in this country, and describing the enthusiasm the groups had for various forms of the dance. They have produced a short film "I Love English Folk Dance!" and a Resource Bank (www.efdss.org/resourcebank) which contains a beautiful collection of Morris and other dance photos as well as a description of each style of dance. This has been produced to "aid the teaching of various forms of English folk dance in schools and youth and adult community groups". DanceEast should take note.

"Dear White People" Blacking Up

On 25th August BBC News reported that Shrewsbury Folk Festival bosses had banned Morris dancers from blacking-up after it had received a complaint that they "could cause racial offence". The festival organisers were quoted as saying: "Dancers wearing full black face paint would not be booked from next year". The decision seems to have been made following a single comment made to an organisation called "Fresh" (Fairness, Respect, Equality Shropshire) who said the ban showed sensitivity "to a changed social climate".

As you can imagine the press were all over this the following day and on 27th August it was necessary for Adam Garland, as Squire of the Ring to make a statement:

"It appears that there have been a number of articles written about this matter recently accompanied by some ill-informed comments concerning racism.

I have heard a number of theories regarding the origin of the practice of 'blacking-up', but the one which seems to be most popular is that performers of the dance knew begging was illegal so disguised themselves by rubbing soot on their faces.

All over the world one finds traditional folk customs for which costume and face paint are integral parts; for example certain tribal dancers in Africa "white" their faces for the performance. In England the Morris world is no different; many Morris Clubs use face paint as part of their costume.

The theory of the tradition originating as a form of disguise through the use of soot has been well documented. These days within the three organisations – The Morris Ring, the Morris Federation, and The Open Morris a whole range of different colours can be seen in many places around the country. The use of one particular colour within these costumes is in no way a statement against one particular societal group and the Morris community refutes the accusation of racism most strongly".

This kind of controversy keeps arising. In April 2014 Will Straw, a candidate for the 2015 General Election, sent a Tweet of himself with the Britannia Coconut Dancers who black-up and received a twitter-storm of allegations of racism. In October 2014 David Cameron (ex-Prime Minister) was also pictured with a blacked-up Morris side (Fox's Morris of Cookley, Worcestershire). This did not seem to arouse so much controversy and even led to an informative article in the Guardian by Martin Kettle in which he said;

"I am pretty confident that the historical origins of such blacking-up are more likely to be rural radical than racist; about hiding from the authorities, not insulting black people ... this rural blacking was mostly about selfprotection. Disguise was the poacher's first defence against identification".

It wasn't just a few isolated poachers who used disguise. The custom of blacking up was also used by smugglers and the "Waltham Blacks", who blackened their faces to prevent identification, may have done a bit of both. They operated in Waltham Chase, Hampshire and were the most famous of groups identified as the "Blacks" but other groups were active elsewhere including Windsor. The Blacks were feared by the aristocracy because they judged that they indulged in "a calculated programme of action, and a conscious social resentment" that distinguished them from normal poachers. The aristocracy, which regarded their activities as a "fairly direct class hatred", wanted to retain hunting as the preserve of the wealthy. It was believed that some of the Blacks had links with the Jacobites and in 1723 a Sussex Tory MP, who hoped to recruit the Blacks to the Jacobite cause, reported that he had seen "two hundred and upwards of these Blacks in a body within half a mile of my house. They had been running brandy. I am told there is no less than a thousand of them".

The ruling class became so fearful of the possible links with the Jacobites as well as the effects of poaching, particularly of deer, that in 1723 Sir Robert Walpole, Britain's first Prime Minister, brought in the "Black Act". upgraded poaching This from а "misdemeanour" to a capital offence if found "in disguise, either by mask or by blackened face". As Martin Kettle argued, "Blacking-up briefly became а southern English battleground between a rural offender subculture and the Hanoverian state and up to 250 different acts of poaching, tree-felling and trespass (were) proscribed by the act (and) carried the death penalty".

The Guardian, demonstrating the perfect balance of a Morris dancer, also carried another article on the same day by Lola Okolosie, a British black feminist of Nigerian heritage, who wrote that:

"In 2014, it is frankly tedious to explain, once again, why and how black-faced minstrels and golliwogs remain problematic. Is the prime minister an expert in the complicated and obscure history of blacking up in Morris dancing? Perhaps he is." She went on to say that "The kneejerk reaction would be to label both the blacking-up tradition and those who practise it as simply racist... yet that would achieve nothing. All that can be said is that there is an obvious tension between the ritual and its modern-day connotations".

Another way of understanding this from a black person's point of view is to have a look at the American film satire (and book) "Dear White People", about "being a black face in a white place", written by black people and set in modern day America. In Suffolk one local experienced dancer has argued that "we should be very careful of dismissing its points as not relevant to the Morris (e.g. because this is the UK and/or because we are not really imitating blacks)". He feels that, "The only people who can decide whether blacking-up cultural practices here in England are acceptable are the English black community. If we want these practices to continue we have to enter into dialogue with the black community and reach a situation they feel broadly comfortable with. If this means our cultural practice must change, so be it".

A ban by festival organisers because some black people may associate blacking-up with golliwogs or black and white minstrels is not necessarily the best way to achieve a mutual understanding of the respective traditions and perspectives but we have to recognise that "blacking-up" may give offence, despite its origins. Perhaps there are other ways to address the "obvious tension" between the recognised tradition as a means of disguise when dancers went begging and "its modern day connotations". Hageneth have evolved a mixture of black and yellow in our face-paint, Kenninghall use black and white but others will continue to use whole face black-up. Old Glory, who always black-up completely, address this by requiring dancers to black-up their lips so as to avoid any "black and white minstrel" effect. What's your solution?

This question in the last issue resulted in an enquiry from a member of Thaxted and Good Easter Molly: "Who would supervise it, which university etc."?

At least 2 universities are prepared to support students wanting to research Morris matters and 2 Morris men are, or have recently been, studying at De Montfort and Essex universities. The reason for the teasing title was because this question was posed, in a most disparaging way, by an assessor of the finished research of one of the students. Needless to say, it did not end happily.

2. Is Morris Dancing a suitable subject for an exhibition?

With all this talk about Morris research and Morris archives, as well as a previous mention of a discussion I had with Suffolk Record Office, it has occurred to me that it may be time to have an exhibition of the East Anglian contribution to the history of the Morris. After all, Thaxted, in one form or another, have been dancing for at least 100 years, East Suffolk will be 60 in 2018 and there are many sides aged about 40 (shame about the dancers!), like Hageneth, who were formed in 1977 at the time of the Queen's Silver Jubilee.

So I think we have something to celebrate (even if some academics disagree). I have spoken to the Museum of East Anglian Life and they are willing to discuss what an exhibition might look like. Anyone interested in exploring this further please contact us.

3. Cecil Sharp House: The Banks of Green Willow - 20th November 2016

Young morris side Fool's Gambit Morris and pioneering wheelchair folk dance group Folk in Motion come together to remember the many morris dancers who lost their lives in the Great War, and to honour women like folk dance teacher Caroline Daisy Daking, who taught Morris to injured soldiers as part of their rehabilitation.

The event will take place on Sunday the 20th of November 16:00–18:00 (doors: 15:30) at Cecil Sharp House. Tickets and further information are available from

4. Strictly Not Come Dancing

For all those of you who get the impression from the general public that your traditional dance hobby is a bit odd, or you wonder yourself why you do it, take 5 minutes to listen on iPlayer to BBC Radio 4's The Listening Project of 7th September 2016, entitled "Jean and Georgina – It's Strictly Not Come Dancing". Fi Glover introduces a conversation between a mother and daughter for whom clog-dancing forms a supportive – and unconventional – bond.

Social Dance Up a Double and Back – Helen Barrett

Up a Double and Back

When this article appears in print, we will be well into Autumnal weather. However, as I write this we are enjoying the last rays of summer. Mid Suffolk Folk Dance Club continued to dance throughout July and August and welcomed several dancers from other clubs who were on summer break.

It was a season full of dancing and laughter. Several of our dancers celebrated major milestones in their lives by hosting dances. We celebrated a Golden Wedding, a 70th Birthday and a 65th Birthday in true dancing style. What better way could there be to mark these occasions?

The Friendship Dancers

On one of the hottest evenings in July, I travelled to Long Melford to meet The Friendship Dancers. Despite the heat, the dancers wore their elaborate and heavy costumes for my benefit so that I could experience the dances in traditional costume.

History of the Group

To understand the origin of this group, it is necessary to travel back to 1950s London, where Robin Hart, then a teenager, joined an Eastern European Dance Group. She started as a member and eventually became the leader of the group, throughout a period of twenty years. During this period, Robin trained as a professional dancer with a special interest in ethnic dance. She took part in a Czechoslovakian Exchange Programme and won a scholarship to Charles University in Prague, in the 1970s. During this time she toured Hungary, Poland and Romania, collecting dances from local dance groups.

The Friendship Dancers

On moving to Suffolk, Robin started teaching at an adult education class in Bury St. Edmunds from 1979. 1984 saw a move to the Sudbury area, where organisers of adult education classes were looking for new ideas. A class was formed under Robin's guidance. This class transferred to Long Melford in 2000. It is now an independent club. From September, the club now meets on a Wednesday afternoon.

Robin takes traditional dances and choreographs them for performance. The group performs at care homes, garden parties and weddings. They recently performed at a Polish wedding in Bury St. Edmunds and were warmly received. They have also danced at a Polish Club in Witham. I find this a wonderfully quirky example of international co-operation across cultures.

Music

Robin uses recorded traditional music which she has collected over the years. Originally, Robin's parents played accordion and flute for her. She still uses some of their original recordings.

Costumes

To demonstrate the range of countries represented through their dance, the dancers wore costumes from 8 different ethnic regions.

Robin's costume is a copy of an original Hungarian village costume. It is beautifully appliquéd and embroidered on the waistcoat and apron. Other regions represented were Bohemia (the Prague area), Poland, East European Gypsy, Russia, Slovak, Lower Bosnia and Moravia.

The Dances

On the evening of my visit, the dancers started with a Czech Dance. The Scarf Dance was colourful and fluid and a pleasure to watch. Robin and one of her experienced

Robin in Hungarian costume

Diana in Moravian costume

dancers then danced a Hungarian Duet. By this stage I was keen to join in and so Robin taught me a Russian lyrical dance danced in a circle. My favourite move was the Old Imperial Salute of "My head, my heart, I greet you". The dancers then demonstrated another Hungarian Dance entitled Yashargi Czardas but nicknamed The Elephant Dance. Our final dance was an Israeli circle dance danced to haunting music.

My thanks go out to Robin and The Friendship Dancers for their warm welcome. They really did live up to their name. I am sure they will not mind if I point out that the dancers cover a similar age range to most of the dance groups in our area, with several of their dancers now in their 80s. Dancing really does keep you young!

Geoff Roberts Norfolk Folk Hero and His Legendary Flying Folk

How often do we hear ourselves thinking, "How do they do that; how do they make that happen so well and command such loyalty from so many?" Meet Geoff Roberts, just one of these folks. To me, Geoff and his unique Flying Folk sessions are the perfect example. Geoff, a quiet, unassuming and modest Norfolk man, is an enthusiastic stalwart of the Norfolk Folk scene, within which his rousing Flying Folk sessions have become an enviable and much enjoyed institution over the last 3 decades.

Now, you may think "What is so unusual about enthusiasts running rousing sessions?" Well, there is a significant difference between Geoff's and others; the clue is in the title, for whereas most folk club sessions remain based at one venue, Geoff's are uniquely itinerant; he takes his aptly named Flying Folk to a different venue each session.

Flying Folk sessions happen mostly on a Saturday night, typically at local pubs, with the encouragement of local licensees with whom Geoff ensures a close relationship. Other locations are equally successful though. Village halls & local festivals, St. Andrew's Hall in Norwich, the Mississippi Riverboat at Horning and even the resplendent Booton Church have all received Flying Folk in the past. The latter is possibly one of Geoff's favourites and best, on his original home patch. Venues lie mainly within a 20 mile radius of Norwich, though there have been occasional forays into "foreign parts" beyond; he has, for example, taken Flying Folk as far as Spalding, once.

Do not think for one minute, though, that these sessions are closet events for a few ardent exponents tucked away in a back room somewhere. Oh no, with Geoff "in the cockpit" and wife Myrtle at his side, his are lively, rousing, free and open sessions for all, folkies and nonfolkies alike, mostly held in a public bar.

Consequently, for years now Flying Folk has attracted a loyal following of talented amateur and semi-professional performers, some of the best in Norfolk, who regularly contribute to each session, many with close links to the Norwich and Norfolk folk scene of the '60s and '70s through to today. Many others join in and are always made welcome when Flying Folk drops in to their locality, and such is the reputation of Flying Folk, that professional musicians have been known to seek it out when they are able.

An evening of Flying Folk is always packed, the atmosphere lively and up tempo, and a good time guaranteed on any selected night, usually at 4 to 6 week intervals. Not unexpectedly, sessions frequently run well into the night and inevitably on occasion into the small hours of the following morning. The Boxing Day Flying Folk is always equally popular and successful, but is perhaps the only exception, starting earlier in the day.

And apparently this all came about by accident. Back in the '80s friends of theirs moved away to Wiltshire, but they did not escape completely. Geoff and Myrtle visited soon after and their hosts laid on a musical session involving melodeons and Morris Dancing while they were there. That experience stimulated a love for the instrument in Geoff, so he bought one. Somewhat after that, friends took over The King's Head public house at Acle and in 1989 Geoff got a few friends together for a music night there which proved very popular. They were subsequently invited to The Earle Arms at Heydon by friends of friends for something similar and equally successful, following which the idea of Flying Folk was born and the rest, as they say, is history.

Since those early days Geoff's Flying Folk sessions have taken place regularly at a variety of venues and grown enormously in popularity and standing. This is in no small way thanks to the enthusiasm and commitment he makes, with Myrtle, organising things himself and keeping in close personal touch with venues and participants alike, many of whom have become good friends over the years.

But, as if that were not enough, Geoff is always keen to keep Flying Folk fresh by finding new venues to visit, so also puts in a huge amount of time visiting and checking out those he thinks might have the right atmosphere. So far, Flying Folk sessions have taken place at an amazing 116 DIFFERENT venues, and there will doubtless be more.

There can be no doubt that Geoff's heroic commitment to his unique Flying Folk sessions, and the support he regularly receives from a faithful corps of performers, enthusiasts and venues have all helped make these sessions the legend that they are today, and made a significant contribution to the richness of the Norfolk folk scene over many years now.

Geoff says, modestly, that he does it because he just loves the music and enjoys making it with the many like-minded friends he has made, but he also enjoys the fact that Flying Folk, by its very nature, is often singing and playing to people who might not otherwise experience folk music, perhaps sowing a seed of interest in them much as happened to him all those years ago.

If you have not been part of a Geoff Roberts Flying Folk session before, you have been missing out on something very special. So do not be afraid to contact him for details and get yourself on his circulation list, either by phone on 01603 429897 (which he prefers), or alternatively by email to geofffolk@gmail.com.

Long may Flying Folk fly!

Looking Back More Simon Haines

Looking Back More 4 Mid-Nineties to Mid-Noughties Simon Haines

Where was I? Ah yes, 1993 and we'd just formed The Hosepipe Band. One November, we travelled to Amiens in Picardy to teach some English dances to an international dance group called Peut Qu' Manquer. What a strange day that was - dance workshops all day followed by a ceilidh in the evening. Our caller, Elaine Barker, called all the moves in French. In between the workshop and the dance we had what our French hosts considered to be a typical "English meal"; this was the menu:

- Aperitif: gin and tonic
- Starter: kidneys with ham and gherkins
- Main course: fish (without batter) and chips
- Dessert: sponge cake and custard

Only our bass player liked the kidneys so he had everybody's.

Following this, we were invited to the group's May festival in Poix de Picardie, a jolly annual gathering attended by groups from various European countries "exchange music and dances". We couldn't go that first year, but we made it the next. A regular feature of the Saturday afternoon at the festival was a trawl / crawl round the cafes of Poix for the purpose of introducing traditional music to the local proletariat or bourgeoisie. Unfortunately, most of the locals who had not drunk too much were not convinced that bagpipes and melodeons constituted music and disappeared fairly rapidly; folk music is no more popular among the general public in France than it is in Britain. The Hosepipe Band went to five cafes in turn and met with indifference or mild irritation wherever we went. In the evening we played our French set for a dance, along with several other bands.

Everyone was very friendly, but that first year we didn't start playing until about one o'clock in the morning. We got back to the place we were staying at about 3.30 am. and had to be up again at 8.00 to go and play in the market square in Poix. I've made it sound very onerous, which it was, but it was also fun to be playing music in France. On subsequent visits, Val and I found ourselves playing with Paddy Butcher and Phil Lyons from the band RSVP. The other members of our two bands didn't want to go to Poix again, so we got together as a quartet and played tunes we all knew. Initially we decided to call ourselves Les Dieux du Haut - a franglais pun on the English group The Two Duos. In time, this experiment led to the formation of Bof! and we've been playing French music together since then.

Val and I continued to be inspired by French and Breton music and, for a number of years, we went to an Easter weekend Fest Diez / Fest Noz in Chateauneuf du Faou near Quimper in western Brittany. It's something we've continued to do from time to time ever since. The French folk music scene in France is even less noticeable than the English folk scene in England. There are a number of high profile festivals such as those at Lorient and Chateau d'Ars (originally St. Chartier), and in Brittany the fest noz scene – their public ceilidhs – is thriving, but they don't have any equivalent of our folk clubs or regular sessions.

On a completely different tack, a year or two later, watching the BBC World Music Awards on TV, I came across the fabulous Gotan Project, whose music was based on traditional Argentine tango and used a combination of acoustic instruments – guitar, violin and bandoneon – and computergenerated samples and beats. What attracted me particularly was their use of the bandoneon, an instrument I had long been fascinated by. I'd even gone so far as to buy one in the mid-1970s because I knew that the traditional Sussex anglo concertina player Scan Tester played one. I assumed it was like the concertina to play and, as long as I restricted myself the middle notes of the left and right hands of the keyboards, I could knock out simple tunes: The Bald-Headed Handle of a Broom followed by Shepherd's Hey was my party piece in the group Rough Justice in the mid eighties. By way of introduction, I always extended the incredibly long bellows of the instrument above my head to the mild amusement of folk club audiences. Unfortunately, I couldn't get beyond using these few notes - all the other notes being arranged in an apparently random order that seemed to make no sense.

Gotan Project

I later discovered Scan Tester didn't know how play the damn thing either! But seeing Gotan Project on TV persuaded me to get the instrument out again. Research on the internet proved that I was correct in assuming the outer notes were randomly arranged, but I did manage to find myself a teach-yourself book and a CD. There were also loads of YouTube lessons and in time I learned to play a few simple tunes, the melody on the right hand and accompanying chords on the left. Unfortunately, although I could manage the melody and the chords, I couldn't actually force my brain to play them at the same time! I watched endless video clips of the master Astor Piazzolla and other players and discovered that, although the bandoneon is a pull-push instrument and has all the notes in both directions, the most common way of playing it was on the pull. It is this method of playing which gives Argentine tango music its excitingly jerky sound. (If you're interested in finding out more, just look up Astor Piazzolla on YouTube.) After a few months, I bought another bandoneon on eBay, but both my original instrument and the second one needed tuning. I took them to the only tuner I could find: Harry Geuns in Belgium. Visiting his workshop, I was captivated by the appearance and sound of his new instruments and ordered one immediately. Subsequently I ordered another of his instruments, the wonderful footbass, which I now play mainly with Martin Newell and The Hosepipe Band, much to the amazement of audiences who are not used to seeing a musician playing with his feet, and usually wearing brightly coloured socks.

Footbass by Harry Geuns

A year or so later, we travelled to The Anvil in Basingstoke to see Gotan Project. It was one of performances that will live with me forever, alongside the solo Thelonius Monk concert I went to in 1965, and my first live Albion Dance Band gig. It was the beginning of a love affair with tango music. I bought loads of CDs and especially enjoyed those 1940s – 1960s recordings from the so-called "golden age" of tango recorded by band leaders such as Anibal Troilo and Oswaldo Pugliese. And although I bought everything produced by Gotan Project, their first CD, Revancha del Tango, remains my favourite.

At this time, most of my playing was with The Hosepipe Band - the usual round of weddings, parties with the occasional festival and dance club. Highlights of the early 2000s included playing in the Royal Festival Hall foyer, spending a weekend in Imola in Italy with which our home-town Colchester was twinned, Sidmouth Festival, a wedding in a Cambridge College where the bride was the spitting image of Anne Widdecombe, and the Cromer Pier Festival fiasco where we were expected to take people's money as they came into the marquee to join the dancing. I could go on. And Bof! continued to play regularly. For three years running we played at the International Hurdy gurdy Festival which took place, somewhat surprisingly, in the Derbyshire village of Youlgrave; we also played at Ely Folk Festival for several years running and started Bury Bal, a group which held regular French dance sessions and occasional dances in and around Bury St. Edmunds.

Bof! At Ely Folk Festival

In addition to these two main bands, we revived Bass Instincts for a couple of years with Nick Sadler replacing Stuart Moffat on bass guitar, and also started a new group, Sticks, which consisted of Val and me and Issy and David Emeney from Sudbury. Around that time I had come across a book entitled "A272 - An Ode to a Road", by a Dutch couple, Pieter and Rita Boogaart who had become obsessed with this cross-country trunk road. The book traced the route of the A272 road which started near Mayfield in Sussex and ran between the North and South Downs to somewhere beyond Winchester. It was an area which was associated in my mind with a number of folk singers: the Copper family, Shirley Collins, Scan Tester etc. I came up with the somewhat eccentric idea of getting together a set of songs and tunes associated with this area of southern England. We augmented traditional material with our own compositions and made a recording entitled "Between the Downs".

Sticks : Simon and Val Haines, Issy and David Emeny

As Sticks we played a few folk clubs and festivals and the CD did quite well. Although it was fun, it lasted only a couple of years, coming to an end when Issy and David Emeney moved to Somerset.

My next Looking Back More will be my last, as it will bring my involvement in folk up to date.

Harp and a Monkey War Stories www.harpandamonkey.com

Harp and a Monkey is a trio from Lancashire and have been around since 2008. The band consists of Martin Purdy (vocals, glockenspiel, accordion, harmonica and keyboards), Simon Jones (harp, guitar, viola) and Andy Smith (banjo, melodica, guitar, and programming).

War Stories is their third album and was released as part of an ongoing project (partsponsored by Arts Council England and The Western Front Association) to mark the centenary of the First World War. Martin Purdy is an expert on WWI and has written three books on the subject. He uses this knowledge to help create what will probably become an iconic album on the human aspects of the Great War. The topics covered are varied, but all focus on the ordinary lives of the men and women who endured those terrible times. Not all the songs are morose there are even some bits of levity and humour depicted. Even in the Great War people had fun!

Musically, it is a cornucopia of traditional songs of the time, new material, and some cleverly fused mixtures of both. There is a core folk feel, enhanced by electronic wizardry. In addition, the album fuses into some of the songs recordings of spoken word from characters remembering the times from their personal perspective. It is a powerful technique although some people (including myself) may feel this distracts from the music and makes it sound more like a documentary.

Six of the songs are all traditional or popular songs or poems of the period that have been rearranged and rewritten to varying degrees by the band. Many will be familiar with the tune Redwing and through talking to many people in sessions, a lot of people will know the children's parody recreated on this album about Charlie Chaplin, who, it was claimed, dodged the draft. A Young Trooper Cut Down is also a traditional song that has been rearranged and it tackles a subject which affected many soldiers yet is seldom discussed - sexual health and the dangers of using prostitutes. A woman speaks of her experience of burying the war dead and the role women played due to a lack of men to undertake this gruesome task. Musically it resembles a children's nursery song despite the tragic content; a glockenspiel adds to the overall innocence of the melody. Another, Soldier, Soldier is based upon a poem by Rudyard Kipling. It follows a conversation between a woman desperately trying to find out information about her lover from a fellow soldier who appears to have an ulterior motive. The music is kept simple with guitar providing and banjo the main accompaniment and interspersed with violin to add drama to the tale.

Returning to the subject of samples, those used on Raise a Glass to Danny effectively bring the story of The Piper of Loo to life. Daniel Laidlaw was awarded the Victoria Cross for his bravery when he played his pipes whilst under heavy fire. He was buried in an unmarked grave despite his actions and the song is a celebration of his life and a recognition of his bravery. Starting with a banjo, it gradually moves towards a Celtic feel, Laidlaw's voice can be heard as he recounts the events and a sample of him playing the pipes is used to end the song, which is very moving although somewhat eerie.

Throughout the album I love the accent of Martin Purdy – his northern twang gives enhanced Englishness to the songs. The instrumentation cannot be faulted, and whether the songs are traditional or new, all are quickly memorable.

There's much more to be found on the band's website, although the album comes well packaged with a full explanation of the etymology of each song– a welcome touch.

This is an excellent album – appealing both to the anti-war sentimentalists and to the historians who like to feel the human stories of the times.

recording of his style with no frills or embellishments. He is noted for his unique repertoire of songs and fiddle tunes which have mainly been acquired from listening to the old singers and musicians in his neck of the woods - North and East Yorkshire.

This is not a slick production number with a cast of thousands. It is the real unvarnished Iim and it is all the better for that. You can hear all the words as clear as a bell and every nuance of the tunes. It sounds as though Jim and his fiddle were put straight in front of a microphone and allowed to get on with it. There are no fancy sound effects getting in the way of hearing the man and his music. Well done, Phil Snell for a lovely recording.

Good Luck to the Barley Corn is a version of the Barley Mow well known in East Anglia and has a much easier chorus than our local one. The Goathland Speed the Plough is recognisable (just) as the more usual tune played round here. I like The Queen of Tavendor which has more than a hint of traveller-style singing in the performance as has Adieu to Old England. Jim credits all the singers from whom he learnt his songs and tunes on the rather small space for sleeve notes on the CD. A song I have never heard before is Fair Ones Are Shining, which is the only one from a printed source - the Folk Song Journal. It is a gripping performance and deserves to be heard a good deal more.

Jim's own quirky songs are great fun to listen to. It's Still Around Somewhere is an amazing little composition that doesn't scan or rhyme, but has a message which promises to haunt the listener. There's a Puffin in my Pint may have been written as a consequence of Jim's employment as resident musician on the Yorkshire Belle sailing boat which took passengers for pleasure trips from Bridlington in the summer. A Message from Ghenghis Khan is an utterly whimsical selfpenned song. The Sylph is a tricky jig that Jim plays with panache. You can tell he is used to playing for dancing.

If I have any criticism of the CD is that some of the tunes could have been played through more times, though that would have reduced the number of tracks on the CD and that would have been a shame.

This is definitely a CD to keep and learn from and to play when in need of a giggle!

Matt Cudby & Erin Brown On Shining Wings www.cudbybrown.co.uk

Matt Cudby and Erin Brown are a duo from Bury St. Edmunds who have just released their debut album "On Shining Wings", which has been funded by money raised through the internet site Kickstarter. The album showcases their talents as musicians, both individually and collectively. Both have fine singing voices. Matt plays the guitar with a lilt that brings folk music alive and Erin is a beautiful fiddle player. With Erin's Irish roots they manage to fuse together both English and Irish tunes and songs that have something for everyone.

Matt played guitar and sang in the young band Leftback, who reached the finals of the Bury Sound competition. He has since been playing guitar, cittern and bouzouki with The Brown Family Band and more recently singing and playing in the eclectic new Cudby-Calder Trio, who recently opened an evening at the Cambridge Folk Club.

Coming from a family background of traditional Irish fiddle playing and singing, Erin first performed in the trailblazing young group No I.D. in the BBC Young Folk Awards. The group went on to make two CDs and played at the Cambridge Folk Festival four times, sharing the stage with the likes of Show of Hands and Martin Simpson.

Their debut album has something for everyone. There are instrumental sets (ideal for any session), and some beautiful songs. Both Matt and Erin have excellent singing voices and they each have solo songs that allow their talents to shine.

The album begins with a rousing instrumental set – March to a Jig whose title hints at the couple's ingenuity in effective and distinctive tune arrangements. This can be clearly heard in The Lollipop Man's Twin Sister – a combination of two Morris tunes where the "evil" component comes from the traditional Twin Sister being transposed to the minor key.

Matt's haunting rendition of the 1950s classic The Long Black Veil tells a tale from the point of view of an executed man falsely accused of murder. He refuses to provide an alibi, since on the night of the murder he was having an affair with his best friend's wife, and would rather die and take their secret to his grave than admit the truth. The chorus describes the woman's mourning visits to his gravesite, wearing a long black veil and enduring a wailing wind.

Erin sings a stunning version of the traditional Irish P Stands for Paddy, augmented by a driving fiddle accompaniment. The album's title comes from the last song The King of Rome named after a successful racing pigeon, winning a race from Rome to England in 1913. It was the subject of a song and book, both by Dave Sudbury.

Whilst Matt and Erin are the main performers I am sure they would be the first to acknowledge the support given to them with both the production of the album and backing musicians. Barry Watson is an extremely accomplished musician in his own right and has done an excellent job on the production work, whilst Sarah Petts (flute and vocals), Adam Brown (bodhrán), Terry Craig(fiddle) and Lizzy Doe (artwork) all help make the whole project a total success. Many of the team join Matt and Erin in their band "Stumpy Oak" and I do urge anyone who enjoys a vibrant mix of folk music to get out and see them.

The album is available to buy from Matt and Erin's website www.cudbybrown.co.uk or can be streamed / downloaded from Spotify, iTunes, Amazon, and Google Play.

amongst those in the "Thanks to ... " list for a CD, but "Sweet Liberties" is one such. The reason? Well, the sleeve notes sum it up nicely: "Sweet Liberties is a commission between Folk by the Oak and EFDSS in partnership with Parliament in the Making as part of their commemorative events to honour 800 years of the pursuit of democracy". All the music was written especially for the album by the performers -Nancy Kerr (vocals, guitar, violin), Martyn Joseph (guitar, vocals), Maz O'Connor and Sam Carter (guitars, vocals), Patsy Reid (violin, viola) and Nick Cooke (melodeon). Most tracks feature one or two singers plus accompaniment, though some get a fuller production; if you have heard "The Elizabethan Session", a previous Folk by the Oak/EFDSS collaboration, the style will be somewhat familiar, not least because many of the vocals on both albums are handled by Kerr.

A good number of advances (or the possible lack thereof) are celebrated on the album, such as land ownership (Kingdom), through homelessness (Rich Man's Hill), workers' rights (Dic Penderyn), the N.H.S. (Nye) to Parliament itself (This Old House), which contains the wry lines "We know it's no good, but it's the best we can do". True enough. Due to the subject matter, a few tracks inevitably tend slightly towards the gloomy in their presentation, but as well as holding a message most are eminently listenable, especially the jolly Lila, about women's suffrage and the abolition of slavery, and One More River, again slaveryrelated, with its spiritual-like feel. Fun fact writer Sam Carter's great, great, great aunt married the son of an escaped slave. The one major exception for me was Seven Notes (about race relations), admittedly described as "an experiment in mixed-modes writing", which so irritated me with its incessant repetition of two lines that I found it difficult to listen to all the way through, possibly defeating the object. However, leaving that aside, "Sweet Liberties" is an intriguing and worthy idea, both as a CD and in its incarnation as a live show, and definitely worth a listen.

Vic Gammon and Friends Early Scottish Ragtime Fellside FECD276

"This CD presents American dance tunes that came to Britain as well as some tunes from England and Scotland that in their rhythmic quality seem to pre-figure ragtime music. The unifying theme of this CD is syncopation, the significant characteristic of Ragtime. Ragtime came to public notice in the 1890s in America and, within months, Europe, too, fell under its spell."

(from the CD notes)

I always consider myself a non-academic folk musician and am naturally suspicious of those who study the folk tradition, so faced with this CD I was all set to offer my usual cynical opinion. The cover is quite plain with just the title, subtitle and players' names with a picture of what looks like sheet music. On closer inspection it is a page from a book which I have in my own collection "Kerr's Merrie Melodies". This is one of the many books from which the music on the CD is taken.

With so much folk music these days rehashed and dressed up as a 'fresh approach' it is enlightening to hear such a new and glorious recording as this. Vic Gammon has produced a perfect sound with every note audible and the main melodies always prominent. There is no show-offy virtuosity but the style shown here can only be achieved by those extremely competent on their instruments. The roster of musicians are Vic Gammon (tenor banio, mandolin and anglo-concertina), Stewart Hardy (fiddle), Steve Harrison (mouth organ), Sandra Kerr (English concertina), Sam Robson (piano), Dan Walsh (five string banjo), Desi Wilkinson (flute) and Celia Winterbottom (bass).

With each track in turn led by a different instrument the sound is varied and gives each player their chance to shine. The opener, Bob Chadduck's Jig, is a lovely concertina and banjo duet augmented by lively piano. The flute, with concertina accompaniment, flourishes through Negro Melody/Hey Daddy. Oakland Garden sees some strident violin, and the banjo takes the lead on Get on the Train, backed by some tasteful chords from the concertina. The final track, Geordie Favourites Set, has some spirited duets: banjo and mandolin, mouth organ and concertina, flute and violin.

This is a CD of unusual material thoroughly researched and beautifully played. A big well done to Vic Gammon and his friends.

The Milkmaid helping Disadvantaged and Vulnerable people access the Folk Arts!

Please help us raise money to refurbish part of Bury St Edmunds railway station. We are turning it into a Folk based arts centre which will accommodate people with disabilities and mental health issues access the folk arts during the day. The evenings and weekends will be for the whole community to enjoy, participate and create folk music, song and dance, making this an important new venue on the folk circuit!

The whole cost of the refurbishment is £540,000 of which we have raised £168,000.

Donations can be made through our donations page on our website www.milkmaidcentre.com or go straight to www.milkmaid.charitycheckout.co.uk

You can donate a 'one-off amount' or sign up to a monthly standing order which will give us a regular amount coming in through the year. Anything you can afford from £1 to a million pounds will be gratefully received! Information:
